

The airlines have repeatedly demonstrated a sort of immunity to market forces and flouting of customer preferences. To maintain a level of civility and for the airlines' own good, I reluctantly urge the continuation of the ban on cell phone usage, except in the event that non-verbal (e-mail, text message) channels can be allowed while maintaining the ban on voice communications.